canadian politicians like many of their circumpolar counterparts brag about their country's arctic identity or northern character but what do they mean exactly stereotypes abound from dudley do right to northern exposure but these southern perspectives fail to capture northern realities in this passionate deeply personal account of modern developments in the canadian north tony penikett corrects confused and outdated notions of a region he became fascinated with as a child and for many years called home during decades of service as a legislator mediator and negotiator penikett bore witness to the advent of a new northern consciousness out of sight of new yorkers and far from the minds of copenhagen's citizens indigenous and non indigenous leaders came together to forge new arctic realities as they dealt with the challenges of the cold war climate change land rights struggles and the boom and bust of resource megaprojects this lively account of their clashes and accommodations not only retraces the footsteps of penikett's personal hunt for a northern identity but also tells the story of an arctic that the world does not yet know in ruin and resilience daniel spoth confronts why the environmental stories told about the u s south curve inevitably toward distressing plotlines examining more than a dozen works of postbellum literature and cinema spoth's analysis winds from john muir's walking journey across the war torn south through the troubling of southern environmentalism's modernity by faulkner and hurston past the accounts of its acceleration in welty and o connor and finally into the present uncovering how the tragic econarrative is transformed by contemporary food studies climate fiction and speculative tales inspired by the region phrased as a reaction to the rising temperatures and swelling sea levels in the south ruin and resilience conceptualizes an environmental ecocritical ethos for the southern united states that takes account of its fundamentally vulnerable status and navigates the space between its reactionary politics and its ecological failures in a remote kingdom there lived a princess adored by her subjects and wielding powerful magic but as her land was ravaged by an endless war she lost everything her people her family her loved ones and eventually her own life until she opened her eyes and awoke in a place she'd never seen before a thousand years have passed and she finds herself reincarnated into someone else's body realizing the person she's now living as is despised by her own family and even her fiancé the former princess struggles to understand this new world and the events that have transpired since her death there's a lot to be upset about but first on the list how in the world

did future magic turn out so lame winner of the 2019 lilla a heston award co winner of the 2018 ethnography division s best book from the nca in recent decades poetry slams and the spoken word artists who compete in them have sparked a resurgent fascination with the world of poetry however there is little critical dialogue that fully engages with the cultural complexities present in slam and spoken word poetry communities as well as their ramifications in killing poetry renowned slam poet javon johnson unpacks some of the complicated issues that comprise performance poetry spaces he argues that the truly radical potential in slam and spoken word communities lies not just in proving literary worth speaking back to power or even in altering power structures but instead in imagining and working towards altogether different social relationships his illuminating ethnography provides a critical history of the slam contextualizes contemporary black poets in larger black literary traditions and does away with the notion that poetry slams are inherently radically democratic and utopic killing poetry at times autobiographical poetic and journalistic analyzes the masculine posturing in the southern california community in particular the sexual assault in the national community and the ways in which related social media inadvertently replicate many of the same white supremacist patriarchal and mainstream logics so many spoken word poets seem to be working against throughout johnson examines the promises and problems within slam and spoken word while illustrating how community is made and remade in hopes of eventually creating the radical spaces so many of these poets strive to achieve a rallying cry to save the earth with an anthropause a term that can apply to any broad rollback of economic activity that gives nature room to recover and flourish an iconoclast of the best kind stan cox has an all too rare commitment to following arguments wherever they lead however politically dangerous that turns out to be naomi klein in the spring of 2020 people worldwide found themselves confined at home in response to pandemic lockdown orders global carbon emissions suddenly plunged 8 8 percent air and noise pollution levels plummeted and streams rivers and lakes noticeably became cleaner animal life quickly filled spaces that humans had deserted scientists documenting how quickly nature flourished in response to less human activity called the phenomena an anthropause for a moment humanity witnessed the beauty of degrowth in a world obsessed with getting and having more more influence more money more fame more stuff the idea of degrowth seems counterintuitive yet as environmental catastrophe becomes more widespread and severe degrowth emerges as a necessary collective intervention to protect the living earth and civilization as we know it from collapse in anthropause stan cox writes that by embracing degrowth we are not turning our backs on progress instead we are redefining it we can produce enough goods to satisfy everyone s needs cox argues while liberating ourselves from ecocidal economies and the injustices they impose this book lays out a clear vision of what we will gain and how as we embrace this revolutionary transition we are seeing climate change happening all around us 2024 was the hottest year on record storms are stronger droughts are longer and wildfires are everywhere as we approach the tipping point toward irreversible climate catastrophe it s clear that we must accept that endless expansion is destructive and reverse it through degrowth anthropause shows us how we and the living world will flourish if we succeed
