this volume analyses the societal legacy of lutheranism in finland by drawing on a multidisciplinary perspective from the social sciences and humanities involving researchers from a wide range of such fields has made it possible to provide fresh and fascinating perspectives on the relationship between lutheranism and finnish society overall the book argues that lutheranism and secular finnish society are deeply intertwined this volume addresses different societal areas which have been significantly influenced by lutheranism but also demonstrate how lutheranism and its institutions have themselves adapted to society as part of an ongoing religious turn in humanities and social sciences research in finland and other countries this book argues that it is necessary to take religion into greater account to more fully understand current societies and cultures as well as their futures society is never just a localized aggregate of people but exists by virtue of its members narrative and conceptual awareness of other times and places in jukka siikala's work this idea evolves into a broad ethnographic and theoretical interest in worlds beyond the horizon in the double sense of past and abroad this book is a tribute to jukka's contributions to anthropology by his colleagues and students and marks his 60th birthday in january 2007 by exploring the near distant inward and outward horizons towards which societies project their reality the authors aim at developing a new productive language for addressing culture as a way of experiencing and engaging the world

aimed at researchers students and all interested in history this multidisciplinary study offers a spectacular view of the history of europe's largest lake adopting the lens of coastal history this edited volume presents the development of the vast great lake's catchment area over a long time span from archaeological traces to viking routes and from fishery huts to luxury villas of the power elite it reflects on people's sensory historical relationships with aquatic nature and considers the benefits and harms of power plants and factories to human communities and the environment the focus of the study is on the central and northern parts of the shores of lake ladoga which belonged to finnish rule between 1812 and 1944 the multidisciplinary approach permits an unusually wide range of questions what has the great lake meant to local residents in cultural and emotional terms how should we conceptualize the extensive and diverse networks of activities that surrounded the lake what kind of ladoga beaches did the finns have to cede to the soviet union at the end of the war in 1944 how have finns reminisced about their lost homelands how have the russians transformed the profile of the region and what is the state of ladoga's waters today the volume is the first overall presentation of lake ladoga which today is entirely part of russia aimed at an international readership the rich source material of cross border research consists of both diverse archival material and chronicles folklore reminiscence and modern satellite images the history of lake ladoga helps readers to understand better the economic political and socio cultural characteristics of the cross border areas and the dynamics of the vulnerable border regions the effects of globalization and the momentous changes to the political map of Europe have led to a world in which multiculturalism and ethnic differences have become issues of increasing importance in Nordic countries. Relationships between new immigrants, local ethnic groups and majorities are created in ongoing and sometimes heated discussions in transforming multicultural societies. Folklore has taken on new manifestations and meanings. How can folklore studies illuminate the present cultural, political and historical changes creating diversities? Folklore, religion and the politics of heritage seek answers to this question. It emphasizes two important factors in the cultural and political exchanges among historical minorities: recent immigrants and the majority groups dictating the conditions of these exchanges. The first factor is religion, which is a powerful tool in the construction of ethnic selves and in the establishment of boundaries between groups. The second factor is the role of national and regional folklore archives and ethnographic and cultural historical museums which create ideas and images of minorities. These representations created in different political climates affect the general understanding of the people depicted. Fifteen well-known folklorists and ethnographers from Norway, Sweden, Finland, Estonia and the United States offer insights and background material on these problems. In addition to immigrants and ethnic minorities in the Nordic countries, especially the Sámi, examples are sought from among the Finno-Ugric minorities in Russia and the Nordic population in North America.

People all over the globe are experiencing unprecedented and often hazardous situations as environments change at speeds never before experienced. This edited collection proposes that anthropological perspectives on landscape have great potential to address the resulting conundrums. The contributions build on broadly phenomenological, structuralist and multi-species approaches to environmental perception and experience but they also argue for incorporating political power into analysis alongside dwelling, cosmology and everyday practice. The book's 13 ethnographically rich chapters explore how the material and the conceptual are entangled in and as landscapes but it also looks at how these processes unfold at many scales in time and space involving different actors with different powers. Thus it reaches towards new methodologies and new ways of using anthropology to engage with the sense of crisis concerning environment, movements of people, climate change and other planetary transformations. Dwelling in Political Landscapes: Contemporary Anthropological Perspectives builds substantially upon anthropological work by Tim Ingold, Anna Tsing and Philippe Descola and on related work beyond which emphasises the ongoing and open ended yet historically conditioned ways in which humans and nonhumans produce the environments they inhabit in such work landscapes are understood as the medium and outcome of meaningful life activities where humans like other animals dwell this means that landscapes are neither social cultural nor natural but socio natural protesting against and moving on from the proverbial dualisms of modern western and maybe capitalist thought is only the first step in renewing anthropology's methodology for the current epoch however the contributions ask how seemingly disconnected temporal representational economic and other systemic dynamics fold back on lived experience that are materialised in landscapes foremost through studying how socially valued landscapes become irreversibly disturbed commodified or subjected to wilful markings or erasures the book explores a number of approaches to how landscapes are entangled in the ways people gather and organise themselves mindful of troubling changes in earth systems all the authors argue from empirics they show that processes of landscape change are always both habitual and laden with choices that is landscape change is political undoubtedly landscape politics is bound up not just in how nature has been imagined but in long histories of consumption today an alarming quest for raw materials and energy continues to change both political and geological formations meanwhile dominant socio political aspirations mean the exploitation of staggering volumes of cheap resources like fossil fuels in order to sustain economic processes that are as taken for granted as they are unsustainable like anthropology generally this book attends to the contextual details buried in such planet scale pictures building on traditional anthropological strengths many authors consider the details of how the past is brought into the present or erased from it in material flows and sensory awareness as well as in narratives that are explicitly linked to particular landscapes colonial identity formation and the different ways that it links with how landscape is viewed and managed for instance for resource development for a global market whether in southern africa israel palestine the canadian arctic or indonesia is a particularly striking example of how to talk about landscape is also to talk about past present and future and as the idea that we inhabit the anthropocene becomes commonplace the discipline can meaningfully discuss the current era as one of disavowed ruins as well as of poorly understood multispecies relations to think of landscape as historically produced across multiple scales does not mean ignoring its sensuous qualities let alone its role in cosmological systems on the contrary the analyses in the collection attend to the ways people's movements through the landscape produce it as a material and conceptual resource taken together the book's ethnographic analyses take on board the unprecedented conditions under which people everywhere are having to make sense and forge relationships to the worlds they inhabit since landscapes are not what they used to be neither can anthropology be responsibility and language practices in place investigates responsibility in and through language practices as inspired by the roots of the english word itself the ability to respond or mount a response to a situation at hand it is thus a responsive kind of responsibility one that focuses not only on demonstrating responsibility for language but highlighting the various ways we respond to situations discursively and metalinguistically this sort of responsibility is part of both individual and collectively negotiated concerns that shift as people contend with processes related to globalization this volume includes chapters by junior and senior scholars hailing from europe asia north america and oceania all of whom seek to understand the social and cultural implications surrounding how people take responsibility for the ways they speak or write in relation to a place whether it is one they have long resided in recently moved to or left a long time ago the editors of this volume are phd laura siragusa university researcher at the university of helsinki and phd jenanne k ferguson assistant professor at macewan university edmonton alberta this anthology is a needed collection of chapters intended for the international audience the editor of the anthology having participated in many international conferences and seminars have often been asked is there roma research in finland what is it like which perspectives does it utilize the main function of this anthology is to reply to those questions it compiles an array of contemporary roma research done in present day finland both by finnish native roma and international scholars it will be of interest to both academic as well as lay readers interested in roma culture and roma life in finland past and present the chapters focus on the research and the life of roma in finland bringing into light various sides of the romani way of life scholars from different fields include historians linguists anthropologists and cultural and social researchers the eternal contemplation and negotiation of identities lie in the heart of any culture we hope that the way finnish research on roma and romani culture discusses these issues brings forth interesting topics to consider for any reader regardless of national or ethnic origin modernisation has been a constant theme in russian history at least since peter the great launched a series of initiatives aimed at closing the economic technical and cultural gap between russia and the more advanced countries of europe all of the leaders of the soviet union and post soviet russia have been intensely aware of this gap and have pursued a number of strategies some more successful than others in order to modernise the country but it would be wrong to view modernisation as a unilinear process which was the exclusive preserve of the state modernisation has had profound effects on russian society and the attitudes of different social groups have been crucial to the success and failure of modernisation this volume examines the broad theme of modernisation in late imperial soviet and post soviet russia both through general overviews of particular topics and specific case studies of modernisation projects and their impact modernisation is seen not just as an economic policy but as a cultural and social phenomenon reflected through such diverse themes as ideology welfare education gender relations transport political reform and the internet the result is the most up to date and comprehensive survey of modernisation in russia available which highlights both one of the perennial problems and the challenges and prospects for contemporary russia
